Headline:
Showers frequent at first. Afternoon dry and bright. Seasonally mild.

Today:
Showers through the morning, quite frequent particularly across Moray and western Aberdeenshire. Turning dry by mid-day with bright and sunny spells becoming widespread for the afternoon, giving a fine end to the day in the seasonally mild maximums. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloud thickening from the south through the evening, with a band of occasionally heavy rain extending northwards to all come dawn. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Friday:
Overcast with periods of occasionally heavy rain at first. This clears south during the morning with brighter spells building through the afternoon. Continuing seasonally mild. Winds light. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Saturday mild again but windy with showers that may merge to longer periods of rain at first. Sunshine and showers for Sunday. Rain then showers Monday, these perhaps wintry later.
